HERITAGE GRANTS OPEN FOR APPLICATIONS

Member for Albury, Greg Aplin is pleased to advise the latest round of NSW Government heritage funding is open.

The three grant programs aim to fund projects that promote and help put planning in place to protect the state's heritage.

Mr Aplin said the latest round of NSW Heritage Grants would help local communities preserve their heritage for future generations.

"This funding is a great opportunity to invest in planning, preserving and promoting our heritage," Mr Aplin said.

"The grants are open to a range of groups such as businesses, councils, community groups, Aboriginal organisations and individuals."

"Locally we have been very successful in securing these grants with a recent announcement of $190,000 for two very worthwhile projects in the electorate," Mr Aplin said.

The latest NSW Heritage Grants are available in three streams.

- Aboriginal Heritage grants of up to $70,000 are available for projects that conserve and promote items of Aboriginal cultural heritage listed on the State Heritage Register or gazetted as an Aboriginal Place.
- Projects which support the promotion, protection and celebration of NSW heritage can apply for grants of $25,000 to $50,000.
- Councils can also apply for grants to prepare heritage reports and heritage planning studies.

The NSW Heritage Grants are open for applications until 29 November. Applications can be for both state and locally listed heritage projects.
