GRANTS TO FIND LOCAL SOLUTIONS TO LOCAL CRIME PROBLEMS

Member for Albury, Greg Aplin MP today encouraged local non-government and not-for-profit community groups, councils, businesses and organisations to apply for a grant up to $250,000 for ideas to boost local safety and pride, with solutions to stamp down on local crime and anti-social behaviour.

“The Community Safety Fund invests in local projects that address local crime hot spots and promote safe and inclusive use of public space,” Mr Aplin said.

“I have heard from many people in our community who have innovative ideas of how to make our community a safer place and I encourage them to take up this funding opportunity.”

Attorney General Mark Speakman said that combatting crime often requires a whole-of-community approach and this funding helps grassroots organisations contribute to make their towns, suburbs and cities safer.

“We are calling on local organisations with crime prevention ideas to come forward, so we can help make these ideas a reality and boost community safety,” Mr Speakman said.

Minister for Police Troy Grant said this program funds community initiatives which will enhance the work of Government and the NSW Police Force in fighting crime both in the cities and in the regions.

“The NSW Government and the NSW Police Force are always looking to partner with local organisations to help prevent crime in communities right across the state,” Mr Grant said.

“We know that a one-size-fits-all approach doesn’t work when it comes to breaking the cycle of local crime, so we are working with communities at a grassroots level to find the right solution for each region.”
