Environment Restoration and Rehabilitation Grants Now Open

Member for Albury, Greg Aplin is calling on community groups and local councils to apply for the NSW Government's 2018 Restoration and Rehabilitation Grant Program.

"These grants deliver funding to local grassroots environmental projects that restore, protect and enhance a variety of NSW environments," Mr Aplin said.

"Community groups, not-for-profit and government entities from across the state are encouraged to apply for a grant between $5,000 and $100,000."

The grant program aims to protect and restore ecosystems and care for the habitats of rare and endangered plants and animals.

The program has been running for over 20 years and is one of the longest running in Australia. It has helped landholders, local councils, government agencies and community groups to restore habitats for native and endangered species, improve water quality and rehabilitate wetland areas.
