FALLEN OFFICERS HONOURED ON NATIONAL POLICE REMEMBRANCE DAY

Member for Albury, Greg Aplin has encouraged the community to pause and reflect on the sacrifice of our fallen NSW Police officers this Saturday 29 September for National Police Remembrance Day.

Mr Aplin said a special ceremony will be held in Albury at the Albury Police Station Church commencing at 11.00am on Friday 28 September.

“Every year we gather to remember the men and women who dedicated their lives to the safety of others,” Mr Aplin said.

“Our police officers go to work day in and day out not knowing what they will confront in the line of duty, or whether they will return home safely at the end of their shift.

“On this day, it is important that we acknowledge those officers who have lost their lives as a result of their policing career. But we must also pay our respects to our local men and women in blue who work tirelessly to keep us safe from harm every day.”

Minister for Police Troy Grant said the community should never take the contribution of our police for granted.

“Our men and women in blue put their lives on the line day-in day-out attending to violent incidents and calls for assistance, not knowing what to expect but ready to do their job and protect the community.

“If you see an officer out on the beat, please stop them and thank them for the work they do,” Mr Grant said.

“On National Police Remembrance Day, I stand with the entire police family to honour those who made the ultimate sacrifice in the name of community safety.”

NSW services for National Police Remembrance Day will be held throughout the week leading up to 29 September.
